Labour told | Thatcher in hospital for major eye surgery

Mrs. Margaret Thatcher anderwent a serious operation yesterday on her damaged right eye after laser treatment failed. The Prime Minister was taken straight to hospital for immediate surgery after visit-ing a Harley Street specialist early yesterday afternoon. In an examination lasting 50 minutes the specialist found that a minor operation carried out on Sunday, details of which were disclosed only yesterday, had not succeded in repairing a tear in the retina, which had become partly detached.

Downing Street said Mrs Thatcher was expected to be in hospital for two or three days and resume her normal pro-gramme next week, when she is due to go on a fortnight's holiday to Switzerland. The earlier operation was carried out under local anaesthetic. A special contact lens was fitted over the eye, through which laser beams were focused in an attempt to seal the tear.

It was said last night to have had a 70 per cent chance of success. Downing Street said the success rate for the second operation was 95 per cent for a detached retina and even better than that for Mrs Thatcher's condition, in which only a tiny part of the retina separated.

The sad truth for women, 13 years after Britain led the field in introducing equal pay legislation, is that their average earnings are still only three quarters of those paid to men, and many even earn less than their male counterparts for work of equal value. Under the existing Equal Pay Act a woman can claim equal pay with a man for work which is "like" his or has been "rated as equivalent" by a job evaluation scheme, but she cannot claim it where she is doing different work, albeit of equal value to the employer.

The loophole is particularly damaging to women in indus-tries where they monopolise one job, and therefore cannot compare their wages with those of a man. In the clothing industry job segregation has traditionally required women to be the machinists and men the cutters. Although they contribute equally to producing clothes, men have always been paid more. Likewise, women who tend to dominate the production and packing lines

Scots 'less violent than English'

By Our Home Affairs

The Scots are more crimina but less violent than the English and Welsh, according to a Home Office study published yesterday. It showed that there was more violence against the person in England and Wales the only offence for which this was so. The study compares recorded crime per capita from 1969 to 1981. In Scotland, the number of offences of violence against the person per 100,000 population rose from 82 in 1969 to 154 in 1981. In England and Wales, the increase was from 78 to 203. The rate for all offence categories in Scotland was higher than in England and Wales by 11 per cent in 1969 and by 40 per cent in 1981. There was more theft and handling in England and Wales at the beginning of the period, but Scotland took the lead from 1976, partly as the result of a change in recording practice. In 1981, the Scottish rate for criminal damage was almost three times that for England and Wales, while figures for fraud and forgery were about twice as high. The rates for burglary and theft and handling were only about one fifth higher than in England and Wales while the

Numbers worry polytechnics

A record number of students went to Britain's 30 polytech-nics last year, figures published yesterday by the Committee of Directors of Polytechnics show. Some polytechnics are reaching the limits of their capacity in certain areas and are becoming alarmed, Mr Roger Blows, the committee's senior administrat-ive assistant, said.

Last year there were 140,000 on full-time and sandwich courses, a rise of 6.6 per cent. The increase in students going to polytechnics is partly a result of the cut in university students.

Hospital patients get royal surprise

The Prince of Wales took a surprise yesterday for patients and staff at Stoke Mandeville Hospital, near Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire: his wife. He had been expected alone to open the hospital's new spinal injuries

turers to switch to the pro-duction of right-hand drive models for Britain during June Flag-waving crowds, who had waited for hours in the bright sunshine, cheered when the royal party arrived

The Prince explained: "The atmosphere and spirit here is quite extraordinary. I mentioned this to my wife and she thought what I had to say was interesting, so she said she would come along as well."

But Mr Jimmy Savile, who launched an appeal to raise £10m for the new unit, suspected an ulterior motive. "Only I know the real reason why the Princess is here, it's a complicated way to get a request played on Radio One", he joked.

His comment brought a giggle from the Princess, who looked cool in an ivory and grey silk two-piece with matching dove grey hat, bag, belt and

Mr Savile acted as host to the royal couple, who were accompanied by Mr Norman Fowler, Secretary of State for Social Services.

The unit has the most modern facilities for disabled people, including Jacuzzi baths and a push-button miniature colour television set for each patient in the intensive care ward.

Mr Savile's campaign raised £10m for the unit in three years. Building began two years ago yesterday.

He described Stoke Mandeville as "a bospital of perfection, built by the laughter and good times of the British public, British Industry and the British media".

The Prince agreed that it was a team effort. "What we see here is, more than anything, a tribute to a very large number of people", he said.

Retrial for Britons amid claims of torture

By Richard Dowden

Three Britons who were convicted of drug smuggling in Peru last December after claiming that they signed false confessions because of torture, are being retried because the public prosecutor has de-manded harsher sentences.

Peter Duffy from Macclesrefer bury from Macces-field was sentenced to eight years and Philip Thorne and Hugh Quigley, both from Bristol, were sentenced to five years each for trying to smuggle

Mr Duffy and Mr Quigley said they were hooded, kicked, beaten and held under water by the police when first arrested in November, 1980.

It is understood that the Peruvian public prosecutor wanted a 25-year sentence for Mr Duffy and ordered the retrial because he felt that police evidence had not been presented well enough.

A British observer at the trial described it as a mixture of Lewis Carroll and Franz Kafka. "The judge laughed when Duffy complained about the torture".

The three have been in prison for nearly three years. Mr Thorne is now passing blood in his urine and has a severe skin infection. Mr Quigley fell and broke his left hand in June. It took him 17 days to get an Xray examination, and he was told that if he wanted plaster, he would have to pay for it.

The three used what little money they had hiring lawyers for the first trial, but they say the lawyers never came to the court and they had to rely on others who did not meet them before the hearings. It is understood that Mr Duffy is being helped by his company.

The Foreign Office in London says that the Peruvian Minister of Justice had "refuted all the allegations" at a meeting with the British Ambassador on February 19 last year.

The southern African "frontine" states are to draw up a list of South African-based foreign correspondents they like and do not like, according to a senior Zimbabwean official.

In other parts of France, the harvest has been damaged hitte and the Chamdamaged little and the Champagne region has escaped entirely. SPECTRUM

Superstar of India

An interviewer recently asked Mother Teresa if she would have taken Galileo's side or Church's in that momentous medieval astronomical controversy had she been around at the time? The possible claimant for eventual canonization smiled and, without batting an eyelid, said: "The Church."

Some of her views, or for that matter her organization's, would certainly make democrats squirm. But she is also among the last of the great missionary superstars. As Father S. M. Dias. deputy secretary general of the Roman Catholic Bishops Conference of India, pointed out: "The focus is no longer on individuals. In fact we actively discourage it and emphasize teamwork. Now people are sent for a few years, do excellent work, and are replaced by others.

Mother Teresa's case is different. She was the founder of a successful movement, the spotlight was focused on her, and she became a phenomenon. But now all the work is being done by subordinate sisters of the Missionaries of Charity. She is travelling so much of the time."

Mother Teresa is undoubtedly a phenomenon. The organization she started on her own in a Calcutta slum, despite considerable hostility from the local Roman Catholic Church, has, 35 years later, blossomed into a "missionary multinational", operating in 52 countries. Today, it has 2,000 Sisters and 400 Brothers in 227 bases, struggling in the slums of 160 cities around the world.

The Missionaries of Charity run 140 slum schools and feed nearly 50.000 people daily at 304 centres; 70 homes look after 4.000 children, arranging for 1.000 adoptions each year: 81 homes for dying destitutes admitted 13.000 people last year, 12.000 poor women were taught to earn their living; and an astronomical 6,000,000 sick people were treated by 670 mobile clinics.

If there is any single reason for this enviable growth, it is undoubtedly the shining example Mother Teresa and her close associates have set day after day for decades in Calcutta's worst slums. Mother Teresa is neither particularly educated nor intelligent, and some of her statements make one wince. But her faith, single-mindedness, grit and stamina have moved mountains.

The other factor could be the Order's vow of poverty. Mother Teresa sleeps on the floor of her tiny room surrounded by files and religious books, her only reading material. Overheads at all the institutions do not exceed 2 per cent of total expenditure. Each sister has two sets of clothes. Mother Teresa had "touched the the order's vow of obedience, no watch films, read books other than ises, arrival and departure times are regulations can lead to expulsion.

But Mother Teresa's dedication moves both the powerful and the poor to tears. India's late premier Jawaharlal Nehru, inaugurating her first children's home in Delhi back in 1961, said in a choked voice: "Believe me, Mother, we need you just as the poor do." American Senator Edward Kennedy, who saw her work in Calcutta during the 1971 Bangladesh war, wept in public. Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, presenting her with the Nehru Award for International Understanding in November, 1972, blinked back tears during a speech in which she said

Overwhelmingly Hindu, they come to offer any support to what is very clearly a Christian movement. As a result, 30 million dollars worth of aid is distributed through her organization

Mother Teresa is explicit about her religion. "I can't bear the pain when people call me a social worker", she said. "My life is devoted to Christ; it is for him that I breathe and see. Had I roughly £4 a month — just chords of our heart. . . In honouring the enough to keep them going 14 hours a day. With that kind of example, few people remain unimpressed.

said 'I thirst'. In the poor we are quenching his thirst.'

The Albanian shopkeeper's daughter from Southern Yugoslavia has come a long and difficult way, and it shows on her gnaried hands, furrowed face and stooped back. Born Agnes Gionxha Bejaxhiu in 1910, her father Nicholas wanted her to marry and settle down. But she had a club foot, and by the age of 12 was very religious.

At 18, with her parents' permission, she became a Loreto nun in Ireland. A year later, in late 1929, she was sent to teach at the order's elitist Loreto School in Calcutta. By the time the Second World War started, sister Agnes as she was known had become mistress of its Bengali section.

Though it seems hard to believe, Calcutta 50 years ago was a beautiful city of palaces. But the man-made Bengal famine of the 1940s sounded its death knell. Five million people died, and hundreds of thousands of starving villagers invaded the city.

Between classes' Sister Agnes would carry clothes and medicine for the children and nurse the sick in the slum adjoining her school. September 10. 1946, was the day she says she heard God's call to leave the convent and help the poor. But it wasn't easy.

ment. Archbishop Ferdinand Periers simply kept her proposal hanging fire.
"I know this woman as a novice," he observed. "She could not light a candle in the chapel properly, and you expect her to start a congregation?" His real fear was the repercussions in the convent. Sister Agnes was promptly despatched to Asansol, a small town to look after the kitchen at the small Loreto school there.

Fortunately for her, her mother superior in Dublin and the Pope with whom she was in direct contact agreed with her proposal. In 1948 she was released from the Loreto Order. An official circular at the time to all Loreto schools in Bengal barely hid the hostility. "Sister Agnes has left the convent Do not speak about it. Do not criticize. Do not praise it. Pray".

Sister Agnes, who took the name Teresa after the 24-year-old French St Therese of the Child Jesus who died in 1897, shifted to a small room in the Little Sisters of the Poor's old age home, insolvent and alone.

It took six months after she left the Loreto convent to get her first helpers Subhashini Das, a former student who today is the second most important functionary in the Missionaries of Charity.

Mother Teresa has grown to love the city and its inhabitants. "Calcutta is not ugly at all," she said recently. "Calcutta has its warmth that you won't find in any other city, not only in India but everywhere. I have worked in Peris I have worked in I or Acceler. Paris. I have worked in Los Angeles. But the poorest of the poor in Calcutta have more dignity than those in any of those affluent cities."

In October 1950 she finally received permission from Rome to start a new congregation. The constitution was consecrated by the Pope and the legend

Mother Teresa's day begins at 4am Mass is at six. From Sam to 11am she visits her Calcutta homes in a station agon - carrying gifts for inmates, talking to the sisters, and often helping with work. Then it is back to her headquarters where hordes of visitors await her. Lunch is spartan, and then the office work begins. After the 6pm Mass, she goes on another round of her homes, then has dinner. While the rest of the community sleeps, she catches up with correspondence. She has three hours sleep a night.

Many of Calcutta's destitute consider Mother Teresa to be God. But given the magnitude of the problem the impact of her work, though valuable, is limited. And she is aware of that. "My work is a drop in the ocean," she concedes. "But if that drop weren't there, the ocean would have one drop less."

Sir, One of the most notorious tricks of hitch-hikers is to put an attractive girl by the side of the road. When an unware driver stops. four or five men jump out from behind the bedge and get in too. For this reason I never pick up girls. Last week stopped to give a lift to a scruffy bearded student and six ravishing blondes jumped out from the trees. I drove on immediately, conscious of my narrow escape.

From Vir. Debby, Rhoda, Sharon etc Sir, We are six ravishing blondes who do a lot of travelling up and down the A4 as we are a dance troupe. Will the motorist who gave a lift to our choreographer please return him at once. Thanks.

From Lord Sprocket

Sir, I am the last surviving remnant of a family which has lived in Rutland for 400 years. Driven by loneliness I gave a lift to a young hitchhiker last month and upon chatting to him discovered that he was the grandson of my great-uncle Harry who emigrated to Australia and was thus my sole heir! Who says that giving lifts to people cannot pay off? Later in the journey has called a cut of the says and religious may off. he pulled a gun on me and relieved me of my brand new BMW. If he should read this letter, I would like him to know that I have disinherited him.

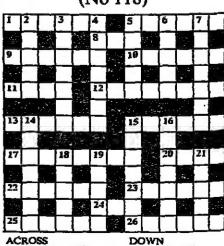

From J. Wentworth-Chestnut

Sir, the first time I gave a lift to a hitchhiker I was so nervous about being assaulted that I kept a knife handy about a threatening gesture but, being prepared, I was able to overpower him. It then transpired that he was not threatening me at all, simply reaching for his cigarettes. But as I had overpowered him I felt I had to go through with it and proceeded to rob him of his worldly possessions. I now regularly pick up and rob any hitch-hiker I can find. Not only does it give me a useful income, it gives me a chance to meet people of all walks of life.

From Sir Dougal Chambers
Sir, as the head of a large corporation I never give lifts to hitch-hikers, and I leave the driving to my chauffeur Harry. Unfortnately, Harry has a predilection for giving lifts to people, and earlier this week I found myself in my own car with six dancers, a bishop who had had his car stolen, and a young man who had had everything stolen by a kindly driver. In future I have decided to travel by train, where at least you can have some privacy.

The House of Commons, 1660-

Edited by Basil Duke Henning (Secker & Warburg, £110, 3-

The House of Commons 1660-1690 is the fifth chunk of the prosopographical undertaking the History of Parliament that has been set on foot in pursuance of Sir Lewis Namier's conviction that the way to understand political history is through the person-alities and interests of individual people in leading positions, and not through the flawed lenses of social abstractions such as classes or parties, let the constitutionally unpre-alone "schools of thought". In the meanwhile there is plenty to be going on with in the period from 1660 to 1690. It includes the longish and colourfully disgraceful reign of Charles II, the four years needed to nerve his exasperated subjects, despite unhappy recollections of the 1640s, to get rid of his silly brother, and the Convention Parliament of 1689 which installed that sound Protestant couple, William and Mary, in the constitutionally unpre-

The Illusionist By Anita Mason (Hamish Hamilton, £8.95)

The River Why By David James

(Hutchinson, £8.50) Through the long bot summer flows the great grey-green, greasy Limpopo River of fiction, O Best Beloved, all set about with fever trees. There is no escaping an epidemic of historical novels, some of them scriously sickening. But Anita Mason's outbreak into ancient history is healthier than most much better, say, than Norman Mailer's Ancient Evenings. about which I dream and wake up screaming in the night.

The Illusionist is about Simon Magus: necromancer, sorcerer of Samaria, inspiration of the Faust legend. It is about magic, miracles, and the difference between the two, in purpose and performance. The difference is crucial: absolute. The most intelligent can find it the most difficult to perceive. Miss Mason has done a lot of thinking about that

Pasternak A Biography By Ronald Hingley

(Weidenfeld & Nicolson, £12.95) The final note is one of triumph, through all the tragic counterpoint of Boris Pasternak's life and times (1890-1960), illuminated so superbly by Ronald Hingley in this enthralling biography. None so well qualified as Mr Hingley to make plain the complexities of this extraordinary Russian dissident poet, whose novel Doctor Zhivago brought him international attention. Mr Hingley's authority in the field of Russian literature is of high distinction, as biographer and translator. One is immediately aware that the author thoroughly under-stands the conflict and ambiguity of Russian and Soviet society, parallels which in the case of Pasternak and his contemporaries interlink, almost psychologically.

Much has been written about

Pasternak's work, yet, in the main. Mr Hingley found that as a man "with his loves his marriages, his living conditions, his temperament" he remained "faceless". Isaiah Berlin's chapter, Meetings with Russian Writers 1945 & 1946, gave us a stringent flavour, and last year's publication of letters exchanged between Pasternak and his cousin. Olga Friedenberg, covered some of the gaps, as does Olga Ivinskaya's A Captive of Time, which records the passion and dedication of her years as Pasternak's last, and deepest, love.

Chronologically the graphical facts are known, from that Jewish artistic liberal background, privileged enough to provide nannies, tutors and foreign travel. Mr Hingley places all these pre-revolution-

Pound/Ford The Story of a Literary Friend-Edited by Poor old Fordie! His life was a complicated mess, he seldom managed to produce work worthy of his genius, he never achieved due recognition in his lifetime (or since) - and, to cap it all be was a friend of Ezra Pound's. This was fine as far as their puffing of each other's works went; over thirty years they scarcely published a bad word about each other. But on the personal level, it was not co-production. Annotation is, always such easy going.

Both men were of course notoriously "difficult" characters, and it is not surprising that they fell out fairly often over the years. But one must pity Ford chiefly for having to read Pound's letters. It is hard to think of a more tiresomely affected epistolary stylist (Larry Adler perhaps?):

It is good to have this account of a literary relationship of considerable importance in the history of modernism. A pity that the material collected is mostly so unappealing and uninteresting (the majority of the letters are concerned largely with business matters). The real substance of the Ford-Pound friendship probably lies else-where, in the conversations of Pound's early days in London, when Ford was briefly at the centre of the modern movement. But there we are: verba fugiunt, scripta manent.

Tonight sees the London debut of the Octetto Ironico at the Air Gallery. Holborn, during which "members of the group will iron different types of clothing and artistic objects, from underwear to evening wear, from the wrappings and bandages of religious relics to the ribbons and laces of exotic corsages". By way of rehearsal the group has ironed the pleats of the arge statue of Buddha in the garden of the V & A, and one of them claims to have ironed the sea at Bognor. For the finale of tonight's Tutti Imprompti au Bal Presse the octet will be forming visual anagrams of the word Euphoria. Not for the first time, the media has over-reacted to an outbreak of typhoid fever. The disease is relatively rare and can effectively be treated. But since confirmation of a number of cases originating on the island of Kos, there have been banner headlines in the newspapers and disquieting comments on radio and television. people about to take holidays abroad have been hastily inoculated, even though inoculation just before departure would be ineffective, as would inoculation in a typhoid-in-fected area itself. One newspaper has even suggested that inoculation be made compulsory for thoe visiting countries where the disease is

The media had a similar field day after the typhoid outbreak at Zermatt during the height of the skiing season in 1963. About 70 Britons were infected. The Swiss authorities were accused of delay in reporting the outbreak, and I was approached by a Swiss journalist to provide him with information so that he could attack his government in a Swiss weekly magazine. I refused. This did not prevent the attack, but did result in my being included in it for refusing to supply ammunition to increase its impact.

An Englishman who had been to Zermatt during the period of infection, but who did not become infected, found himself and his family ostracized on his return home: objections were made to his children attending school, and a local provision store was reluctant to serve his wife with food.

A television team approached me during this period and asked my help in putting on a programme about the Zermatt outbreak. Hoping to be able to persuade people to "play it cool". I agreed. However, as the programme took shape I became uneasy, because I felt that it was concentrating on sensational rather than informative aspects of the affair. I complained of this to a member of the production team while they were filming in my laboratory. I pointed out that there were lessons to be learnt from this outbreak and that it would be better to concentrate on those, I shall always remember his reply: "Doctor, we're in this game to entertain the public, not to educate it."

In the following year (1964) a typhoid outbreak burst on the unlucky town of Aberdeen. As typhoid is my business, I was also intimately involved in this epidemic. By this time the mass media, primed by Zermatt and by a few small outbreaks in this country probably caused by infected corned beef, were ready to explode at news

And explode they did, especially when it became evident that the Aberdeen incident was big and that its source was probably corned beef, had to go virtually incommunicado. Otherwise my work would have been impeded by the many attempts by journalists of different sorts to obtain information from me. While I was trying to play it down, others were doing their best to stir it up. And there was genuinely widespread alarm at the suggested possibility that the infection might become nationwide. What nonsense!

Typhoid infection occurs only by way of mouth. If you do not swallow the typhoid bacillus you do not contract the disease. Typhoid is not contagious like smallpox, nor is it respiratory diseases. Typhoid cases or carriers do not go round surrounded by a cloud of infection; they can transmit the disase only by contaminating water supplies or food with their excreta. Typhoid is predominantly a discase of countries with poor hygiene, water supplies prone to contamination, and inadequate sewage disposal. As this country

E. S. Anderson puts the typhoid outbreak in perspective

Beware, a bad epidemic of news hysteria ranks among the best in the world in these respects, its incidence of typhoid is correspondingly low.

In 1982, 168 cases of typhoid were reported from England and Wales to the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre at Colindale, London. Twenty-one (12 per cent) were contracted in this country and 147 (88 per cent) were infected abroad: 93 on the Indian subcontinent and 16 in Mediterranean countries - two in Spain, three in France, four in Italy, and one each in Algeria, Malta and Greece. The total works out at less than 0.3 per 100,000 of the British population.

Typhoid is easy to treat nowadays. Chloramphenicol is the drug of choice and the disease responds fallen from about 10 per cent to 1 per cent or less. For example, of 507 cases infected in the Aberdeen outbreak, only three died - a mortality rate of 0.6 per cent. And at least one death was of an elderly woman already gravely ill. Although typhoid is still a grave disease, therefore, its outcome need no longer be feared as it was in the days before chloramphenicol.

A small percentage, probably less than three, of persons contracting typhoid become chronic carriers of the disease. Naturally, the lower the incidence of the disease, the lower the residium of carriers. Although it might be thought that carriers frequently transmit infection, this is not so. Indeed, it is striking how rarely such transmission occurs. A number of the typhoid carriers detected because they have passed on the disease have been elderly women who acquired the infection many years earlier. They may have brought up entire families without infecting them, but in their old age their personal hygiene has deteriorated so that they have contaminated food and caused isolated their detection. In one instance a female carrier. whose excreta were found to be contaminating a local stream which caused an outbreak in 1948, was established to have to have been infected in 1895. She had been a schoolmistress all her working life, but the only evidence that she had previously transmitted the disease was in 1926 when two visitors staying with her contracted typhoid. So she could scarcely be described as having constituted an active threat to her environment.

Once carriers are detected, the risk present to others is explained to them and they are carefully instructed in the rules of personal hygiene. They are usually only too anxious to cooperate. They cannot, of course, be employed in the food industry, or on water undertakings at points, where they could contaminate they cannot be contaminated to the contaminate they cannot be contaminated to the contaminate they cannot be contaminated to the contaminated t points where they could contaminate supplies. But in most other occupations they present little risk

Drug therapy has proved disappointing in the treatment of carriers.

Chloramphenicol, so useful in the treatment of the acute disease, is useless for the carrier state. Success has been claimed for other antibacterial drugs from time to time, and it is worth giving some of them a trial. Surgery is the only alternative treatment in the event of failure of drug therapy.

The carrier state is mostly caused by chronic gall bladder infection with the typhoid bacillus, and removal of the gall bladder offers a 70 to 80 per cent prospect of cure. But the operative risk may be considerable in an elderly person in indifferent health, and since the rules of hygiene, are usually observed by carriers, so that they cause no further infection, it may be advisable to avoid surgery. In younger, otherwise healthy carriers, however, it should be considered as the treatment of choice if the carrier state persists despite drug therapy. I confidently expect our indigenous incidence of typhoid infection to dwindle to vanishing point in the long term. So long as people go on holiday to areas of relatively high typhoid incidence such as the Mediterranean basin, however, we shall continue to import the disease. But bearing in mind the millions of British holidaymakers travelling abroad, the individual risk is very small indeed. And it can be reduced still further by anti-typhoid inocu-lation once in three to four years, by avoiding eating foods such as green salads and raw shellfish when visiting countries where typhoid is common and by using only steri-lized water, either bottled mineral water (preferably aerated), or treated with water-sterilizing tablets, which are available cheaply from pharmacists and are easy to use.

in any event a case of typhoid presents a negligible risk to the general population. Secondary cases, that is, those infected by transmission from patients infected at the primary source, are rare.

Typhoid outbreaks are easily controlled; indeed, they are usually self-limiting. The outbreak runs its course and ceases. The trouble is that typhoid has an average incubation period of about nine to 14 days, with extremes of as little as three days or as long as six or more weeks, and that not all patients fall

The full extent of an outbreak may therefore take some weeks to declare itself. But this does not mean that infection is persisting, or spreading it means simply that different people infected at the same time have different incubation periods and thus fall ill at different

There is thus no need for panic about typhoid; no need to ostracize contacts; no need to fuss about carriers, most of whom only very exceptionally transmit the infection easily controlled; and least of all is there any justification for the sensationalism to which this relatively rare and quite tractable disease is submitted by the media.

But Mr Murray detects a definite shift in Labour movement opinion, a new mood of pragmatism that will carry the day at Blackpool. "We shall see changes, and a degree of realism which has not always been evident. We shall see a recognition of the realities of the situation which has not characterized Congress for a few years now."

The change is overdue, he said. "When we are not in a dialogue and not being challenged by government, we tend to look at our own navels and to move or be driven into positions that are not always realistic. We need the challenge of being involved, and of having to accept the responsibilities of being involved, which always acts as a check on our theoretical ambitions.

'That is one factor, the other is that we have to be prepared to order our demands in terms of priorities and relate them to what can be simultaneously and immediately. But our ability to establish realistic policies will be influenced by whether we are able to bargain with the government". That is why, he argues, the unions must test the ice by talking to Mr Tebbit about his desire to make it casier for trade unionists to opt out of paying the political levy to the Labour Party. That discussion could broaden into a more general exchange on the Tebbit plan to intoduce compulsory secret ballots for trade union elections. What the unions cannot gauge in advance, of course, is whether ministers will take any notice of their arguments. Such evidence as there is on this score is not encouraging the Transport Minister last week declined to intervene to prevent the imminent closure of three railway workshops, and the Environment Secretary ofered scant hope to contruction unions seeking a boost for the building industry.

But the balance of advantage still lies in talking, Mr Murray insists. The TUC's main instrument of policy is argument and negotiation.

The prospect of failure does not deter him. Even if this government does not take his view, future Conservative governments will.
"The whole nature of our society requires government to accept that the trade unions are part of our life." And if that requires a different perspective on TUC aspirations, so be it. "The one thing we have learned over the past five years is that we have to take a longer view than traditionally we have done".

Mr Murray talks as though he has already counted the votes and knows he has it in the bag. He is achieved at any particular time - almost certainly right. The TUC is rather than asking for everything ripe for change, as its own internal reforms show. From next month, when all unions with more than 100,000 members qualify for automatic seats, the General Council will be more representative of white collar and moderate opinion.

It is an historic shift away from the TUC's manual roots, and signals the end of the dominance of the old, heavy industry unions that were traditionally more political than the white-collar organizations that have taken their place. It is appropriate that Mr Arthur Scargill, the left-wing miners'leader. should voluntarily leave the General Council at this time; his confrontationist policies appear singularly out of place in the new, more pragmatic environment. However, it would be premature to write off the direct-action lobby

Mr Murray believes that the current improvement in the economy will encourage trade unionists to "put their heads above the parapet" more than in recent years. And when the TUC does seek to negotiate with the Government, it will be on a basis of opposition to present economic and social policies. A cessation of hostilities will not necessarily lead to a fruitful peace. Much hangs on that crucial first meeting with Mr Tebbit. Understandably, there is less emphasis in this year's agenda on achieving policies through the Labour Party, though it is still seen as the best available political alternativ

The Alliance is not taken seriously at present, though the Murray doctrine would require contacts if it appeared that the SDP-Liberal coalition had a good chance of forming a government.

So what will change at Blackpool?

It seems there will be a general scaling-down of expectations, and a different style. The TUC will behave more like one of its constituent unions, deciding what it wants and going for things one at a time instead of asking for everything at once.
Attention will be re-focused on bread and butter issues rather than grandiose policies on nuclear wea-pous and foreign affairs. It is likely that Britain's membership of the EEC will be reluctantly accepted. The Labour movement's economic strategy will also be reappraised, and the 1984 Economic Review will be less utopian. There will be greater emphasis on winning rank-and-file support for union policies, if possible through a new daily paper reflecting the labour movement's values. One way and another, it sounds like the old TUC carthorse, and it probably is.

Labour: the worst is yet to come institutions and political parties when the next apparently important happening makes no significant difference to the outcome. Thus I doubt whether the long-term outlook for the Labour Party would be much different if Mr Roy Hattersley were to be its next leader instead of Mr Neil Kinnock.

Even if Mr Tony Benn's stand-in,
Mr Michael Meacher, were to be elected deputy to Mr Kinnock instead of Mr Hattersley it would probably alter little except, perhaps, the speed of events. When left-wing union leaders conferred privately last week about whether Mr Hattersley or Mr Meacher should be the deputy, they were only discus-sing cosmetics. The question was simply whether Mr Hattersley's moderate reputation would enable Labour to keep on its now ordained path to the left with fewer splits, and more acceptably to the electorate, than would be possible with Mr Meacher's dogmatism.

If Mr Peter Shore were going to be elected that would indeed make a difference. A Labour Party capable of choosing the only candidate who could appeal to its old national constituency against the unions and the left would, by definition, be a different party from the one which considers only Mr Kinnock and Mr

Hattersley to be papabile.

But Mr Shore is not in the race and Mr Hattersley's claim to stand seriously for moderation and a more realistic response to Labour's elec-tion defeat is less than convincing. It is true that he supports the West, favours membership of the European Community and does not want to nationalize everything in sight. But to compensate for these socialist shortcomings he has absurdly advocated the licensing and control of all City institutions to improve investment and has adopted some (as he might say) passionate positions in the name of equality which are hardly likely to appeal greatly to the common opinion of traditional Labour voters.

Thus he has now announced grandly that Labour is a party not of equality of opportunity, but of "equality of outcome". Everyone is left to interpret this for himself and no doubt Mr Scargill's increasingly bourgeois miners will. It could mean no more than that Mr Hattersley wants some more reverse discrimination on race and sex and more redistributionist fiscal policies to pay for welfare. Or, taken literally, it could mean that the men in Whitehall ought to assess much more closely what is required to ensure that the living conditions of everyone are related more to their idea of his need, a concept hitherto thought to have dangerous political implications. Or it could mean nothing at all.

Mr Hattersley has the habit of enunciating his moral statements with a specially plosive manner of delivery. The "p"s and "b"s of his the eye of the television camera with a force plainly meant to symbolize his righteous conviction and toughness. The trouble is that a politician who has stomached as much as Mr is one of quite dramatic Hattersley has in the name of unity insignificance.

There comes a stage in the decline of is hardly the man to stand up to the institutions and political parties left now.

He has always said that he would never in any circumstances leave the Labour Party, and to say that sort of thing quite so loudly and repeatedly hardly enhances the bargaining power of anyone who wishes to change a party's direction.

So even if it were Mr Hattersley instead of either Mr Kinnock or Mr Meacher it would probably make little difference (except in detail and timing) to the direction of the Labour Party. He has no significant braking power. What, then, will happen to Labour under any of the forsceable combinations? At least one former and senior Labour Cabinet minister believes there will be an exit of between 40 and 60 Labour MPs (particularly if Labour does badly in the local elections in May) to form a new independent Democratic Labour Party (based on Westminster and mostly funded by the allowances paid to MPs for their staffs initially). This would make common cause with the SDP and Liberals, leading towards a realigned radical party as the principal alternative to Mrs Thatcher.

Dr David Owen sees it differently. He has decided on an open-door policy for all individual refugees from the Labour Party who wish to come to the SDP. They will be welcome without inquisition about their past performance or why they have held back so long. There will be no gibing hostility to Labour right-wingers in the final fragmentation of their old party (symbolized by Labour's 7.4 per cent poll at Penrith.) The watchword, as another Social Democrat put it, is generosity. But they expect individual recruits rather than the emergence of yet another independent Labour Party. That makes sense.

An exodus of a sufficient band of Labour MPs able to form their own organization seems unlikely. Future defectors will either be older ex-Cabinet ministers who are over the hill in terms of party power, or junior ex-ministers and back-benchers whose only base is their seat in Parliament. There are no more Owens and Jenkinses among them. There is no room for a second ex-Labour Party so long as Dr Owen resists amalgamation with the Liberals and keeps the SDP as Labour's successor.

Conservatives look on all this benignly and are willing to help where they can. Mr Tebbit's Bill requiring union ballots to approve political funding will purposely contain an early date for the first ballot so as to precipitate action. Some unions, when balloted, are expected not to throw any more money away on Labour, some of these might pay funds to no party; others might fund the SDP. Many would stay with Labour. What the consequences would be for the TUC is not yet a question for sensible speculation. Against the seismic background of such prospective events, the question whether Mr Hattersley would be a better leader than Mr Kinnock or a more moderate deputy than Mr Meacher

Our beloved folk hero Robin Hood as an oppressed minority, which has undergone a strange metamor-would take away the need to rob phosis. Tired of well-cut costumes in Lincoln Green and campfire singsongs in the greenwood, he has discovered the works of Marx and Lenin. A new £2m ITV series on the Sherwood outlaw - filming ends this week - portrays the merry men as a group of "very committed" left-wingers sombre enough to sell the Militant newspaper.

"We have done away with all the feathers and pointed hats and green tights," said director Paul Knight. "This is Robin Hood for the 1980s. The merry men are a group of punks who live wild in the forest; they are freedom fighters. Will Scarlet is a real killer, he's played by Ray Winstone, who starred in Scum."

All of which goes well beyond the comfortable memories of the 1956 series with Richard Green. Even Maid Marian's virginal status is not sacred. "Marian lives with Robin in the forest. She does not sit on the battlements wistfully waiting. She is very committed too - Greenham Common and so on"

But the presence of the liberated Ms Marian, portrayed by the aptly named Judi Trott, could lead to problems. Imagine the comrades facing the evil Tebbit of Notting. ham, hows drawn, when: "Stop that Robin," says Marian. "You know that in the last merry vote on unilateralism arrows and swords were banned as first-strike weapons. Only Little John's staff is negotiable, and that is to be phased out within five years."

Back they would troop to the "peace camp" in the forest, and Robin would not put his foot down. Our fearless outlaw has now become a "Peter Tathell figure", says Knight; Michael Praed, who plays him, describes this new Robin of Bermondsey as "vulnerable" and

"non-macho".

Help is at hand in the shape of a 19-stone Friar Tuck who bears more relation to Clive Jenkins than to Monsignor Bruce Kent. "He really gets in on the action," says Knight. But Robin's real friend is a wood god with large, staring eyes called Herne the Hunter who comes out with a lot of socialist mysticism and is obviously meant to be Tony Benn, except that he has antiers and his predictions come true. .

'It's not how I see Robin Hood.'

said Mr Martin Brandon-Bravo, Conservative MP for Nottingham. South. "In this city we take enormous pride in Robin Hood. "He would not have been a left-winger, far from it. I see the idea of the left being the only caring people as a totally phoney argument. Robin Hood would be a Tory wet, very damp around the edges."

So would anyone be after living in Sherwood Forest, and Mr Brandon-Bravo, former councillor and rowing enthusiast, laid another myth to rest. Of course Robin did not strip the sheriff of his power. It was local government reorganization in 1973". The even damper Mr Heath can thus take the credit. The sheriff of Nottingham himself, Mr Dennis Birkinshaw, aA former football referee, puts Robin at inside-left: "But I don't see him as a Kinnock or a Hattersley. Robin was an athletic chap - if of course there really was a Robin Hood." The only concrete evidence was an arrow head found in the top of the Major Oak years ago by local history

"I'm afraid that was mine," said former Goon and achery fanatic Michael Bentine. "It was in my toxophilite period. I was playing in Doncaster with Peter Sellers and David Lodge and wanted to see Robin's Oak."

"We took along my bow, as one does, and some hunting arrows made for me by a postmaster in Surrey. I shot one of the arrows into the top of the tree, much to Sellers' amusement. Years later part of the tree blew down in a storm and there was a great to-do when the local museum found this arrow head of the same pattern as used by Robin

Hood..."

Bentine has a novel theory about Hood: "The Scots were much better archers than the English, who couldn't hit anything except William Rufus. It might be that Robin Hood was Scottish."

BALANCE-SHEET OF MEDICINE

The curious affair of the Whipp's Cross cordon sanitaire is only one of many signs of how deeply the NHS has been rattled by developments since the election. Faced with a succession of novel and unsettling initiatives by the Government, it is no surprise if parts of the service themselves begin to fall back on improvisation, with an eye to political Whipp's Cross hospital, faced with the call for more spending cuts in the current year, announced this week that it would turn away patients living outside a "catchment area" determined by the hospital itself, except for serious emergencies and references to named consultants. By this means the hospital hopes to avoid treating many hundreds of patients in a full year, and consequently to save itself the expense of doing so. Whether or not the patients eventually find treatment elsewhere, they will not figure as a charge on the budget of Whipp's Cross hospital.

Clearly this is no way to manage the resources of a national public service designed to meet social need. The rapid, if rather baffled, protest by the Regional Health Authority shows that it sees how damaging the practice could be if it spread. This is not at all what is meant by the use of initiative in seeking ways of cutting costs. Neighbouring hospitals in similar financial straits would be given a strong market incentive to impose a similar rule. Patients would be thrown back on a family practitioner service, which in the East End is acknowledged to have marked shortcomings - the very reason why many patients presented themselves at hospital in the first place.

It is a London problem, and a "hospitals-versus GPs" problem: as such it points to several of the worst areas of potential friction in the NHS today. London's position in the perpetual haggling over distribution of finance is paradoxical: it is at once embarrassingly over-provided, with world-famous teaching hospitals and specialist institutions, and painfully underprovided, in areas where the profusion of hospitals has inhibited the development of GP

At both governmental subjectively perceived most and managerial level it will be painfully by those who manage it essential not to lose sight of the in London and other apparently fortunate places.

As far as national expenditure is concerned, nothing is gained by one hospital paiming off patients on its neighbours. But any accounting system which provides incentives to efficiency at the local level (which should in principle be best placed to judge how resources should be allocated) is apt also to create incentives to the minimizing, regardless of efficiency, of any loss-making activity. A similar factor was exposed last month when Mr Lawson demanded savings from the hospitals to compensate for an anticipated overspend in GP services.

Hospitals are cash-limited, which means that if there are more patients dying of kidney disease than budgeted facilities to cure them (and there always are), the surplus of patients are given only palliative treatment. and will die. General practice, by contrast, is demand-led: whoever turns up has a right to expect some sort of appropriate treatcombine efficiency and economy as best he can. It is statistically possible to estimate the annual cost, but last year the Government chose to budget on the basis of a low estimate, and now naturally finds it likely that the budget will be exceeded. Having no means of enforcing retrenchment on the GPs, it has imposed it on the hospitals instead. A hospitals have not been unaware of the savings to be made by community, and back on to the GP budget. These rather ignominious

It is still true that the Government has treated the NHS fairly, compared to other parts of the public sector. The constraints on future public expenditure are so severethat it is inescapable that the NHS will have to bear its share of hardship. More debate is needed about what its due share should be. Mr Fowler can claim that even after the Lawson bounce (which concerned an overrup on allocations however arrived at) there has been no betraval of his promise that NHS spending as a whole would not be cut.

The commitment to a growth in real terms of half of one per cent a year over the next decade still stands. But there is no escaping the fact that this scheme implies some deterioration of services. Local interest will have to be subordinated to

dumping at sea

From the General Secretary of the National Union of Seamen

Sir, Like charity, concern for the environment begins at home. So I was disappointed to find you had devoted a leading article (July 20) to the activities of Greenpeace in Siberia and the ecological impact of Soviet industrial policies rather than to an environmental controversy now raging here in Britain in which Greenpeace has also been involved. I refer to plans by the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority to dump nearly 4,000 tonnes of deadly radioactive waste some 500 miles from Land's End. This was due to start on July 11 but, thanks to the actions of the National Union of Seamen, the Transport and General Workers' Union and the train drivers' union Aslef, the dump ship Atlantic Fisher has been stranded at Barrow and the waste has failed to reach Sharpness, the port at which it was due to be loaded.

As a result it appears that the UKAEA's plans must now be abandoned and the British Government will be forced to comply with the wishes of a clear majority represented on the London Dumping Convention, the United Nations-sponsored agency which regulates the disposal of all poten-

The NUS has been inundated with messages of support from individuals and organizations around the world, including Jacques Cousteau, the mayors of towns and cities along the French and Spanish Atlantic seaboard, scientific groups, environmentalists and seafarers unions. Given the attitude of our Government towards trade unionism, it is ironic that it has taken a successful act of defiance against Government policy by three unions to protect Britain's good name in the international maritime community.

As you said in an admirable leading article on the subject earlier this year, it is not possible, either technically or politically, to go on using the sea indefinitely as a nuclear dump site. Is it not therefore time for the Government and the UKAEA, which are responsible for dumping 80 per cent of the nuclear waste tipped into the world's oceans, to announce an end to this shortsighted and irresponsible activity?

Yours faithfully, JIM SLATER, General Secretary, National Union of Seamen, Maritime House, Clapham, SW4.

Paid jobs for all

From the Chairman of Youth Call Sir, What I found missing in Mr Francis Bennion's letter (July 28) was a recognition of the fact that there is a host of unmet needs in the community which could be underbe unemployed, or by young people as part of their training for life. Thousands of such jobs, in care for the elderly and the handicapped, in hospitals and schools, in nature conservation and eisewhere, have been listed in successive reports prepared for the Government or by bodies such as the L.S.E.

The Government is rightly seeking to avoid the creation of meaningless jobs. But it does need to provide the framework and the incentives to enable the community to benefit from the energies of those for whom, as Mr Bennion says, society is unlikely to be able to provide paid jobs in the normal sense. This need cost very little more than what is saved on the dole for those concerned.

Yours faithfully, NICHOLAS STACEY Chairman, Youth Call, Springfield, Maidstone.

Radioactive waste Benefits from over-valued dollar

From Professor H. W. Singer

Sir, In your editorial (August 1) you are very critical and gloomy about the over-valued dollar. But surely there are other ways of looking at

If, as you say, the United States may have a trade deficit of $60bn to $100bn (and a somewhat smaller but still very sizable balance of pay-ments deficit) is this not a good thing for the rest of us? If the US sucks in $60bn to $100bn more of our goods than it supplies, does it not help to promote employment and a satisfactory balance of trade position for us here? And also, with 25 per cent of US imports coming from developing countries - does it not help to promote economic development? Why should we

You think that this situation is "unsustainable", but if any economy in the world can sustain it it would be the US economy; and in any case by the time the situation changes the US trade deficit may have done its good work and converted the vicious deflationary circle of depression and rising unemployment into its reverse beneficial cycle.

Now it is true as you point out that the US sucks in not only our commodities but also our capital. This means that we do not benefit from our export surplus to the US by domestic investment to the extent that we might. But it still means that we are commanding claims against the US economy for those future years which you fear so much, when the US will no longer supply us with ready-made dollars through its trade deficit. Moreover as you yourself say the "money is sent to the United States as a haven from political risk".

Can you blame the US for that? Would lower interest sates cure this situation? I think the more likely scenario is that the capital flows to the US would occur for political reasons even if the trade deficit did not exist - would this not be an incomparably worse situation when we would get the worst of both worlds?

Long live the US trade deficit! Yours faithfully, H. W. SINGER, Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex,

From Sir Alan Neale

August 2.

Sir, Your leader on the overvalued dollar (August 1) shows no awareness that the conditions you criticize are an inescapable consequence of the monetarist doctrines which in other contexts you support.

As you say, economic logic would expect a country with a huge current account deficit to have a weak currency. Then with floating exchange rates its exports will be cheap in world markets and its imports dear in the home market; and the system will adjust towards a new balance.

But once all eyes are turned to the money supply, the main component of which is the lending of the country's domestic banking system, it is seen as essential to meet any sign of expansion by raising interest rates. Then in a country like the USA, where there is no danger whatever of default, vast quantities of mobile international funds are moved to take advantage of the interest rate differential.

Now the country with the weak current account goes, as you say, to the top of the currency league. Instead of setting in train an adjustment process, it imports other people's money and further restricts own economic activity and employment. But this is monetarism: the surprise is that you should be surprised. Yours faithfully

Parents and Pill

From Mrs Birgit Carolin

Sir, I have been following with interest the case brought against the West Norfolk and Wisbech Health Authority by Mrs Victoria Gillick concerning the provision of contraceptive advice to girls under 16.

Having three daughters myself, I partly understand her feelings, but am relieved she lost her case. Surely her fears for her own daughters are groundless, since no doctor would prescribe contraceptives without her girls' specific request, which, in view of their firm Catholic upbringing, seems highly unlikely.

Girls lacking such guidance and control, however, have a right, it seems to me, to the confidential counsel and advice of a doctor. whose concern is not only for the young girl, but also for her unwanted to reflect our society's deep ambivalence towards sexual experience amongst the young Perhaps the time has come to review the law.

A girl under 16 is, apparently, regarded as a passive recipient rather than an active participant in the act of intercourse. If this were so, which I question, the law, as it now stands, offers her poor protection. In practice, without the evidence of conception, it is virtually unworkable and, even then, or in the extreme case of rape, very rarely invoked by her parents, however concerned they may be for her moral and physical welfare.

As parents we recognise that our sons and daughters must, one day, take full responsibility for themselves, in sexual as in all other aspects of their lives. Independence of thought and action, supported by adults, must necessarily involve the loosening of parental bonds.

I do not encourage or condone promiscuity; I am in favour of responsible parenthood. Without abdicating my own responsibility as a parent, I am glad to know that anyone's daughter, including my own, has a recognised right to contraceptive advice, in confidence, under the NHS. But I should like to see the law revised to take into account the growing autonomy of young people in the important area of sex.

Yours sincerely. BIRGIT CAROLIN, 37 Blackheath Park, SE3.

Night time 'nuisance'

From Mr. W. John Parkman

Sir, The query by Mr Maslen, National Farmers' Union (July 26), as to how long Mr Bertram has been living next to farmland would seem to be of much less relevance in the light of the ITV programme, Against the Grain (July 26) which referred to "our changing countryside, thanks to subsidies being given to farmers for foodstuffs we do not want."

Whilst Mr Maslen's corollary of a disturbance "for a very few hours per year" is valid, a more prevalent and 'protracted "nuisance" than night farming is the use of the automatic explosive gas gun aimed at preventing birds attacking crops. The resultant detonations from dawn to dusk over periods of approximately three weeks total many thousands and with two or three guns in operation the intervals between explosions are often reduced to seconds.

Given time, progress on reducing overmanning and fraud losses would enable a reasonably priced London Transport service to be operated without subsidies substantially in excess of those recommended by the Government in its 1983 Transport Act. However, if London Transport's existing revenue fares subsidy was reduced suddenly from the current £210m to the £110m recommended by the Transport Act, then fares would have to be increased by at least 20 per cent. Pain and anger of Armenians

From Mr D. M. Thomas Sir, No one who has talked with peaceable Armenians, and who has read Armenian poetry, could imagine that the pain and anger over the massacres of 1915 need to be cultivated by an alien power, as Roger Scruton suggests (July 26). Likewise, I have heard too many speak, with still-living sorrow, of their families, all but wiped out two generations ago, for me to doubt that something terrible took place. Whether half a million, or a million, or a million and a half, were killed is academic, like the exact number of Jews led into the gas chambers.

If the modern generation of Germans said to the Jews, in effect, "It never happened; or if it did it has been greatly exaggerated, and in any case is none of our business" one can imagine the feelings of

The Armenians suffer from an unacknowledged genocide: that is one crucial reason why the events of 1915 - so far, far away from Mr Scruton's Salisbury Review - are only a step away from every Armenian.

How chillingly The Times article: verified Hitler's sardonic remark' when he first mooted the finalsolution: "Who now remembers the Armenians?"

It seems to me, as an outsider, that if only the Turks could say: "it happened, and we're sorry", the anger of moderate Armenians would be eased, and their few extremists would have no cover for their continuing the cycle of barbarity. Mr Scruton's article, on the other hand, can only entrench bitterness, not promote reconciliation.

Going to the zoo

From Sir Richard Way Sir, Your editorial, "Going to the Zoo" (July 23) deals in a generally fair way with a topical and important question. But in certain respects it creates an impression about the London Zoo and Whipsnade which, in my view as a member of the council of only five-years and therefore not particularly-defensive about the past, does them less than justice. The best zoos are indeed "institutions of research and conservation" and London can pride intself on its leading position in both respects. It would be an outrage, however, to set out to conserve exotic species, or indeed to be responsible for any animals, without being able to provide first-class veterinary and other services. It is not, by definition, a narrowly commercial operation and this is demonstrated by the fact that every other comparable zoo in the world has long been either subsidised or wholly maintained from public funds. As you say, the London Zoo "has had to be bailed out by the state more than once"; in its 157 years of existence, twice to be precise (both occasions in the 1960s) if one excepts the current situation on which discussions are proceeding with the Government.

Your remark that the Zoo "disdains commerce", tempered by your recognition of "some signs of unbending in the last year or two", iscertainly misleading and a little unfair. In the five years since I have been on its council the question of how to attract more visitors has been constantly discussed. The fact that we have so far failed may possibly indicate a lack of imagin-ation, but is is certainly not due to any failure to recognise the crucial importance of this objective. It is not, as you suggest, the society's charter which restricts our freedom on "the showbusiness side" but the fact that, in London, we operate wholly within a royal park and are (rightly in my view) much more inhibited in the measures we can adopt to attract customers than we should be elsewhere. Finally, I wonder whether, before alleging that the society is too secretive, you glanced at the annual report. It is an absolute mine of information of all sorts. Yours faithfully, RICHARD WAY,

Lack of certificate not fatal to case

Before Lord Justice Robert Goff and Mr Justice Forbes [Judgment delivered July 29],

if an information alleging an offence against regulations made under section 31 of the Gas Act 1972 was laid within three months of information sufficient in his opinion to justify the prosecution coming to the notice of the secretary of state, the information was validly laid notwithstanding that it had not been accompanied by a certificate under section 43 of the 1972 Act as under section 43 of the 1972 Act as to the date upon which that information had come to the secretary of state's knowledge. Moreover, where justices declined jurisdiction to hear an information, the appropriate remedy was an appeal by way of case stated, not an application for judicial review. The Queen's Bench Divisional Court so held dismissing an application for judical review by the Director of Public Prosecutions but allowing an appeal out of time against the refusal of the stipendiary magistrate sitting at Clerkenwell to hear informations alleging offences against the Gas Safety Regulations (SI 1972 No 1178). Business as usual for the airline which lived to fly again another day. Right: a Middle East Airlines' Boeing 707 taking off from its Beirut base. Left: the burned-out wreckage of another MEA Boeing - one of 16 destroyed at Beirut over the past seven years:

Robert Fisk reports first-hand on the

airline which war could not ground

Middle East Airlines seems to treat shellfire like occasional showers of rain. When Beirut Airport comes under artillery or missile attack - as it did again last month - the ranways are temporarily closed, the airport staff take shelter in the terminals and watch to see whether their rather elderly Boeing 707s and 720s escape shrapael.

Incredibly, they usually do.

If this is "business as usual", the mentality is sometimes taken to extreme lengths. I recall flying into Beirut during the civil war in 1976 on an MEA flight from Amman. There were only an MEA light from Amman. There were only five passengers on the Boeing 707 and the inflight catering facilities had long ago been suspended because of the fighting in Beirut. As a substitute, the stewardess presented me before landing with a large bottle of whisky. "Compliments of MEA", she said with a smile. "You're going to need it". She was right. Shells started landing round the airport while I was clearing immigration and there was a corpse lying spreadengled on the payement heside the lying apreadeagled on the pavement beside the airport car park. Welcome to Lebanon.

MEA crews can entertain you with a library of hair-raising stories, of planes taking off under rocket fire and of landing in Europe with bullet holes in the tail. The company likes to talk about the loyalty of its staff and it is true that you could fly on an MEA plane at the most terrible ments of Lehanon's long war and find a crew of Christian Maronites, Sunni and Shiz Muslims, Druzes and Armenians all working

It is also true that MEA is one of the few industries in Lebanon that has provided permanent employment in time of war.
In 1981 alone, MEA reported a loss of more than £10m and expressed the hope of better days to come. A year later, however, Israel's invasio of Lebanon had turned the airport into a front line. The sight of two MEA Boeings burning on the tarmer was one of the war's most depressing symbols for the airline staff. When the airport reopened in the antumn, President Amin Gemayel greeted the first jet to land: the airline country's regular recoveries of self-confidence.

Some of the planes are beginning to look rather old and the company's much publicized decision to acquire the A310 Airbus has yet to be fulfilled. Three 747s run MEA's new route to New York but the planes are white elephants. Not long ago, the company was flying them out on the short-hand Cairo route so that they could refuel in Egypt where fuel costs are lower than

But there is not much that MEA cannot do for its passengers. The wine is free in all classes and briendly station managers often upgrade regular travellers from economy to first class. Never ask why journalists prefer the airline. After risking their lives to film the hotel battles in 1976, one American television crew was so desperate to get their material out of Lebanon that they asked MEA for an entire airliner. The got a 747, fully crewed, in just under half an hour. The cost was catastrophic: so was the film, after technicians in London accidentally developed it in the wrong chemical and destroyed every frame.

The airline lost one plane over Saudi Arabia in 1976 - apparently blown up by a bomb - that killed more than 80 passengers and crew. Staff have died in Lebanon's series of wars over the past eight years: gunmen took two of them from the airport and murdered them in 1976: a stewardess was killed by a shell as she waited to leave for a flight the same year. A pilot lost a leg while fighting in the Phalengist militia.

But MEA can probably survive anything these days. Its new executive office building at Beirut airport contains four floors above ground and four below. The company's vice president, who says the underground accommodation was built purely because of height restrictions, believes he can shelter, feed and provide heds for 2,000 people to live beneath the earth for three months at a time. It may be a pessimistic way of planning for the future but MEA has a habit of living to fly again another day.

The barrier to an airline dream streses produced by the Iraq- during the same period. Iran war, the invasion of Lebanon, and a sharp fall in the production and price of oil, the Arab nations are still enthusiastic about aviation, both civil and military.

The vastness of the Middle East, its inhospitable terrain, and the lack of surface links, mean that people and goods must fly in support of the ambitious modernization programmes embarked on in the last decade. In the middle 1970s, the 17 Arab airlines carried only 11/2 per cent of the world's traffic, but the figure has risen to around 7 per cent and the trend shows no sign of

All of the big aircraft manufacturers see the Arab airline world as one of their most promising markets during the rest of this decade, and according to McDonnell Douglas figures, traffic between Europe and the Middle East will grow by an average of 7 per cent a year betwen now and 1990,

ession, and regional economic East by 10.3 per cent annually Between them, the Arab airlines have about 300 jet airliners, more and more of them wide-bodied, and they carry 25 million passengers and more than 30,000 tonnes of freight a year to earn £4,300m. They have, however, a long way to go before they can capitalize fully on the key geographical position of their region in the world's air network. At present, an inordinately large proportion of the traffic to and through the region is carried by non-Arab airlines, and the Arab airlines themselves are in intense and wasteful competition with each other, particularly on routes to North America and the Far

The dream of an Arab regional airline along the lines of Scandinavian Airlines System, which incorporates Swe-Norway and Denmark, or Air Afrique, which draws together nine states in Africa. with engineering carried out jointly, in the manner of the groups, has long been pursued by a few of the more far-sighted leaders, but has failed to materialize mainly because of the strength of nationalism in

The idealists want to see routes between the countries of the various members of the Arab Air Carriers Organization (AACO) designated as domestic services within the bilateral agreements. But little has been accomplished in this area, also because of nationalism. Some progress towards unification is being made, however, notably in the stamping out of fare and cargo rate discounting among AACO members (and in the launching of a joint attack on this practice against foreign carriers flying through the region) and in the maintenance of some aircraft.

Through the Arab Technical Consortium, Middle East Airlines is to carry out all 747 overhauls; Kuwait Airways will work on all European Airbus A310s; and Saudia will look after all TriStars. An effort is to standards among AACO members in the major technical disciplines, and to standardize pilot-training courses. But a plan for a central training academy has been dropped as being too unwieldy, and another for a central, computer-based reservations system is considered unworkable because of the disparate nature of the AACO airlines, and the differing nature of their operations.

Considering that many of them started only after the Second World War, and then relied heavily for several decades on expatriate expertise for running of their corporate and day-to-day operations, the Arab airlines have done well to reach the point at which they stand today. The 1970s saw them indulging in an enormous spending boom on new planes, and the technology with which to back them up: the computers, the flight simulators, engineering workshops, and training they relied heavily on government resources called from the petroleum bonanza to carry them through this period. It is doubtful whether, by the hard accounting criteria applied to European and US airlines, many of them are profitable, but then most are expected by their governments to operate certain services at highly-uneconomic fares, particularly at the time of the Haj, when whole populations flock to the holy cities of Mecca and Medina.

The goal of the Arab airlines continues to be "Arabization", but the day when they can dispense with all expatriates and run their own companies with locally produced technical talent still appears to be a long further by the big expansion of the 1970s.

One estimate is that despite intensive training schemes, today almost 50 per cent of ilots within the Arab airlines. and 35 per cent of engineers are expatriates. Apart from national pride, there is a strong incentive ... to replace expatriates with is reckoned that it costs five times as much to employ an outside pilot as it does an Arab.

In the defence sector, spend-,,,, ing on military aviation and its associated hardware continues ""? at a high rate among the Arab nations as they attempt to modernize their often-outdated inventories against an unsettled political background.

Aircraft, missiles, and systems, continue to be bought from the Eastern bloc, particularly by Libya, Iraq, and Syria. Purchases from the West, especially the US, Britain and France, range from the small and very simple (Bahrain's defence force consists of just five helicopters and six fighters) to the large and highly-sophisti-.

The regional leader in this "" latter category is Saudi Arabia which has invested, and con--tinues to invest, thousands of ... millions of pounds in equipping the Royal Saudi Air Force with the sort of weaponry and backup systems which the air forces many Western countries would envy. Arabization in this sector has a low priority, and the Saudis have long-term contracts covering maintenance, support and training with a number of aerospace manufacturers from the West, among them Northrop and McDonnel Douglas of the US, and British Aerospace.

A terminal fit for a king

The Middle East has long been one of the great aviation staging refuelled their aircraft and refreshed their passengers on the long routes between Europe and the Far East and Australasia. But most of its airports verged on the primitive, by Western standards, until the petrodollar boom of the early Designing, managing, building, and equipping these airports has necessitated a huge influx of experience from outside. Britain, the United States, France and West Germany are prominent among countries which have supplied technical and commercial experts, while the labour to build the runways, passenger terminals and other buildings, and to lay the roads connecting the airports with the cities they serve, has also been flown in from abroad, most notably from the Far East and Pakistan.

Bahrain, one of the airports heavily used in transit by non-Arab airlines and an important centre for the Arab airlines (which between them carry over 25 million passengers a year) has gained a reputation for being one of the most modern and efficient airports in the Seeb and Salalah, the two principal airports in Oman, are being enlarged and updated, and Cairo International has been extended to deal with up to five million passengers a year. Abu Dhabi, another important staging point for long-distance travel, has a new sirport designed to handle three million passengers a year at first, and 10 million by the turn of the century. The old airport in Abu Dhabi has undergone extensive modernization.

Dubai plans to double the size of its international airport. with a new arrival terminal costing £250m. Sharjah's new airport, costing £330m, has been largely designed by the ruler Shaikh Sultan.

Kuwait has a new three storey terminal building designed to handle 2.2m passengers a year and plans for a second terminal are in hand. The recently built Queen Alia International Airport, Jordan, will have a capacity for 2.5m passengers annually by the middle 1980s, and for up to eight million by the end of this

The "showcase" developement of the area is the King Abdulaziz International Airport at Jeddah, Saudia Arabia, al-though the recently-completed King Khalid International Airport at Riyach, in the same kingdom is vying with it. The King Abdulaziz took six years from 1976 to build. The old Jeddah airport was not only outdated but was being rapidly development. > Other buildings included maintenance hangars, and aircargo terminal, a food service centre, control tower, and a desalination plant for processing water from the Red Sea near by. A nursery was established to produce 15,000 plants each year as part of a soil-stabilization programme. More than 70,000 trees and plants have already been planted.

One of the biggest buildings can hold 50,000 pilgrims at one time under its fibreglass roof

The Saudis consider it their duty as Muslims to help pilgrims making the Haj, and to this end the Haj terminal at the King Abdulaziz is one of the biggest buildings in the world. It can accommodate up to 50,000 pilgrims at one time under its roof, which is made of fibregalss, and gives the impression of a series of desert tents.

The royal terminal is also an example of striking design. Its roof is covered with copper, and white marble from quarries in Greece. Internally, its halls are magnificently furnished, the main feature being a reception pavilion accommodating 300. Other facilities include conference rooms, a press room, and a medical suite. Outside there is a parade ground where guards of honour receive distinguished guests. The whole terminal stands in an oasis-like setting. with pairn trees and pools.

to be seen. Meanwhile Saudia is reportedly planning further investment in communications facilities, training and support services to help it remain viable in the more austere years ahead.

Saudia is responsible to its own national interests. Gulf Air on the other hand has to serve four states the UAE, Qatar. Bahrain and Oman. Nevertheless it is a successful airline second only to Saudia and in less than a decade its turnover has grown from $8m to $600m. Last year the airline carried two million passengers. MEA is highly experienced, professional but more than others appreciates the need for regional cooperation on airline matters. At a conference of the Arab Air Carriers Organisation in March held in Abu Dhabi, the secretary-general, Salim Salam, who is also MEA's chairman, commented that Arab airlines could reduce their overheads by a regional div-ision of labour. He envisaged Boeing 747's being serviced in Beirut, Airbus A310's in Kuwait, Lockheed TriStars in Saudi Arabia and avionics maintenance being carried out by MEA and Alia. Apart from keeping flying one of the main challenges to profitable airline operations is what Salam and others chose to call "illegal discounting" on tickets of between 25-60 per cent. What is rarely explained is bow such tickets can be sold at all if not provided by the airlines in the first place.

Not everybody wants to fly from Abu Dhabi to London via Solla but it seems unlikely that arrines will be willing for any extended period to fly less than half full if seats can be filled at less than nominal price. Few passengers will complain but airline accountancy is thrown into chaos by discounting. Arab airlines have reached an early maturity. But they face increasing costs for the purchase of a new generation of fuel-efficient aircraft and for Arabising workforces. In the next few years consolidation rather than presuge therefore is likely to be the keynote in

The high quality of hotels also means that charges are high and so the possibilities of negotiating package holidays based on cheap accommodation suffers. There are also plans to organise a Jordan/UAE joint package holiday in the coming winter season. The latter, made in conjunction with Alia. the Royal Jordanian Airline would include five nights in Jordan and five nights in Sharjah for a package price of about £850. Jim Smith of Jasmin also offers holidays to Syria which he insists is one of the most relaxed places in the Middle East.

The scope exists for a growth of tourism to the Gulf, but as a spokesman for Dubai National Air Travel Agency (DNATA) asks: "Just how much tourism does the area want?" After all. the Gulf countries do not need foreign currency for the time being. The countries are also very wary of becoming like Spain and Greece and open to the less desirable influences of the West. Dennis Russell Davies's reputation stands high in Europe and his native America, but he has never conducted publicly in Britain: he makes his début at tomorrow's Prom, in a programme including Henze as well as The Rite of Spring. Interview by Paul Griffiths

A happy gift for seizing chances

Davies; "I just like the music"

Musical success stories are normally quick to travel these days, but when Dennis Russell Davies arrives to conduct tomorrow's Prom he will be making his first public appearance in this country, despite the fact that he has been winning golden opinions for his work in concert halls and opera houses across his native America and continental Europe for well over a decade. Quite why he should not have conducted here before is a mystery, to him as much as to anyone else. And it seems all the stranger when so far his career has been blessed with lucky opporunities that, obviously, it has taken a more-than-ordinary talent to seize and vindicate so regularly.

The luck began when he was a student at the Juilliard School in New York. "I had played some Ives in a recital, and in the eyes of the administration that made me a modern music specialist. So, when Luciano Berio was forming the Juilliard Ensemble at the school in 1968, I was invited to be the pianist and assistant conductor. I'd been studying both piano and conducting Playing the piano is still something he likes to do, in music that is characteristically various: he has recorded sextets by Danzi and a solo piece by Keith Jarrett, Ritual fo liano. But while he was with the Juilliard Ensemble conducting became his main activity. "I'm a good pianist, but I realized that I would never made an international career as one. And also I like making music with a lot of other people."

He is, indeed, a quiet man but a happily sociable musician. As music director of the Cabrillo Festival, taking place each August at Santa Cruz in California, he has brought about a cheerful meeting place for a personal choice of stars and music. Each year there is a composer-in-residence (Cage last year, Henze this), but the range is wide, from informal recitals to orchestral concerts to outdoor jamborees. It is, in Cage's coinage, a peculiarly "festivalitious"

But Cabrillo is only a part of the Davies story, the summer holiday in a round of engagements that includes conducting American music with the American Composers Orhestra in New York, making guest appearances with orchestras ranging from the Ensemble InterContemporain to the Berlin Philharmonic, and fulfilling the duties of General Music Director in Stuttgart, a post be has held since most of the leading composers of that eneration. Berio himself invited Davies to conduct his opera Opera at Santa Fe in 1970: That was important. It was my first big conducting job, and also I met my wife." There was, too, the start of an association with Henze, who heard him conduct Natascha Ungeheuer with the Juilliard Ensemble.

"He seemed pleased, and he said he'd like to work with me again. I didn't think anything of it, but about a year later he rang me and asked if I vould conduct some new productions he was going to do in Germany, And that was how I came to Stuttgart. First we did Henze's Boulevard Solitude. then We Come to the River, and then Die Zauberslöte, still with Henze producing. That Zauberslöte was in 1978; Silvio Varviso was leaving and they asked me if I would take the job."

Taking the Stuttgart post meant leaving his first regular position, with the St Paul Chamber Orchestra in Minnesota, where he had been music director since 1972. "That was - I think it still is - the only full-time sional chamber orchestra in the United States, and so I immediately advertised it as being the best. I didn't that Neville Marriner had done so well with the orchestra, concentrating on seventeenth and eighteenthcentury music. Instead I wanted to do a lot of modern music, but mixed with classical pieces. So we would have, say, the Carter Double Concerto with Schubert, and we worked a lot with composers there: Carter, Cage, Copland, Berio, Henze."

Yet another fruitful working re-lationship was with Bruno Maderna. was close to Bruno towards the end of his life. In 1974 he was due to conduct Pelléas et Mélisande for the Netherlands Opera, and he asked me to be his assistant, with the understanding that I would do whatever he couldn't do. In the event he died a week before rehearsals, and so I took over. Davies is happy to acknowledge how much he has owed to fortunate meetings like that: another admirer is Alfred Brendel, with whom he is due to perform all the Beethoven piano concertos in two concerts with the Berlin Philharmonic in September. But, equally, musicians like Brendel and Henze do not give over their lovalties without reason.

"Actually, if people ask me how I've managed do so much, I usually say it's been through doing too much modern music. You know, in the early days I was always being advised that I shouldn't do too much modern music, that I would become stereotyped. But in fact most of the things I've done have come through working with composers and doing contemporary music."

Nor is there any likelihood that that will stop. In Stuttgart next March Davies will be conducting the world première of Philip Glass's third opera, Echnaton; meanwhile there will be more modern music with the BBC Symphony Orchestra in December. There is also his work with the American Composers Orchestra, attempting to correct the "appalling lack of knowledge among American conductors and American orchestras about American music". But it is not just missionary zeal that leads him to programme twentieth-century works so often: "I just like the music". One wishes that were not, coming from a conductor, such an extraordinary as much of a celebration of Amid standing ovations, only Année Racine as of Année the director, Jean-Claude Fall, Rameau. Three years before the was booed. His split-level misecomposition of Rameau's Hinpolyte, the 14-year-old Mozart had witnessed in Milan the première of his own Racine opera Mitridate, re di Ponto. And, just as that was to be his first major public test in the field of opera seria, so at Aix Mozart was put on trial once more in the first staging of the opera to be mounted in France. The first-night audience took the work to their hearts. Its success was due almost entirely to an exceptionally strong cast of young singers and to the vital musical direction of Theodor Guschlbauer (who gave Aix its flute last year), conducting the Nouvel Orchestre Philharmonique de Radio-France. In a work primarily to glorify the egos of specific singers, many a latent glory of La clemenza here or Don Giovanni there rose to the surface through the sheer dramatic intensity of projection, while the work's long and taxing recitatives were charged with a momentum which crackled between stage and pit.

Within the ever-tightening love triangle of the princess Aspasia and the two rival brothers, Sifare and Farmace, Yvonne Kenny, from her first aria, "Al' destin" through to her suicide aria "Pallid' ombre", fleshed out vocal virtuosity with a performance of emotional breadth. Both in her duets with Aspasia and in her exceptionally wide-ranging solos. Ashley Putnam brought virility and brilliance to the castrato part of Sifare, while Sandra Browne, lowering and menacing as Farnace, compensated for some weaknesses with a characterization of bold and pereptive

Marvis Martin was a pliable, sweet-voiced Ismène and Joan Rodgers made a creditable trousers-role debut as Arbate; but it was Rockwell Blake, familiar from the Met, as a Mitridate of extraordinary physical and musical stature, who stole the show, hurling his athletic, heroic tenor (in its top register almost a haute-contre) into the leaps of "Tu che fedel" or moulding almost impercep-en-scène (an expendience, apparently, to hide the Hippolyte set behind), with its Louis XV chair and model ox dug into a snowy desert, did at times seem as arbitrary as the neurotic flurries of activity from the Arabian-clad protagonists at every available orchestral interlude. But, in the wide spaces of Gerard Didier's uncluttered decor and telling lighting, enough of the music was able to speak for itself.

Of Nicolas Joel's new production and Ralf Weikart's musical direction of La cenerentola in the festival's new openair venue, the Glyndebournelike grounds of the seventeenthcentury Palais Vendome, the less said the better. Even the superb musiclanship and bravura performance of Lucia Valentini-Terrani, standing in for Teresa Berganza as Cenerentoperformance weighed down by orchestral playing both as heavy and as tinselly as the sets and costumes of Patrice Cauchetier and a cast who came nowhere near reaching the demands of

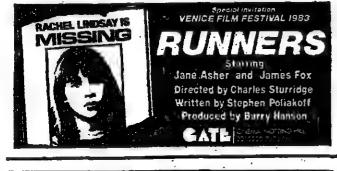

Twentieth-century came invigoratingly into the festival under the auspices of the Paris-based Centre Acanthes who, during their week's practical course with Luciano Berio in Aix's Conservatoire Darius Milhaud, presented a "Journée Anton Webern": a concert given by the Ensemble Inter-Contemporain led by Boulez, and an early-evening recital. It was a brave undertaking to present in the open-air cloister of Saint-Sauveur the minutely imagined Five Pieces for string quartet and the Lieder of Op 4. 23 and 25. Theatre Jauntily musical approach to Shaw

From that giorio improbability, David William's production hits a vein of total American companies doing brisk business with pirated adaptations of Cashel Byron's Profession, Shaw sat down and wrote his own adaptation. The Admirable Bashville, in a week to preserve his stage copyright; choosing the "rigmarole style" of blank verse because he could turn it out

The result was a spirited burlesque (much as Shaw insisted on billing it as his celebrated drama in blank verse") whose main defect was its awkward playing length. Benny Green has now remedied that drawback, equipping it with numbers by himself and Denis King which bring it up to a full evening's entertainment. Whatever its future on other stages, this jaunty musical has found its right home in the Open Air Theatre. It has been proved over the years that the hows that thrive best at this address are those that defy the environment, Bashville defics it with a vengrance.

My heart began sinking during the opening scene in Wiltstoken Park with Lydia (Christina Collier), its languishing owner, bewailing her solitary state to a sympathetic chorus of amplified bird-song. But once the pugilistic Byron pops up in the sylvan glade, combining courtship with press-ups and exchanging Shakespearian in-sults with his bottle-nosed artificiality from which it never looks back. The action moves on to society comedy in Lydia's town house, with Tim Goodchild's ornate double doors opening straight on to the bushes; and thence to the scene of Byron's great fight in the Islington Agricultural Hall, with pearly kings and tumbling girls in attendance, plus a blind lady in a wheelchair who arises and joins in the general scrimmage when the ring is invaded by a visiting party of Zulus dressed up to the nines for battle.

To these Shavian effects, Green and King add a rousing set of pastiche Victoriau musichall numbers, accompanied by boatered players in a fairy-lit bandstand, and proving Shaw's textual pillaging of Shakespeare to be fully compatible with the legacy of Marie Lloyd. Some of the numbers do no more than pad out the playing time; but Mr Green produces some lyrics that have the rhyming wit and street flavour of the Edgware Road, and there are some that really reinforce Shaw's point such as Byron's mock-tribute to the British class system, Gentleman's True to his Code". which brings in the whole under-stairs staff into a Belgra-

Peter Woodward's Byron has the great merit of projecting all the absurd heroics while also preserving Shaw's serious admiration for the fight game. The lecture-bout with Paradise (Vicenzo Nicoli) generates the same kind of excitement as Cyrano's ballade duel. Engaged

W. S. Gilbert's comedy was written in 1877, when The Sorcerer was going into production and the later Savoy operas were just a twinkle in their father's eye. Last seen in London at the National in 1975, it views the expressions of feeling round the Victorian marriage market with a cynicism that makes Ben Jonson and Wycherley seem full of the milk of human kindness. Mercilessly honest and ex-choice of play for a small new management. Engaged opens in the grounds of a Border cottage where braw Angus (Jack Soutar) makes a wee bonest living from his illicit whisky still, some poaching and a few sleepers laid across the main Glasgow railway line to dislodge delayed travellers for opportune and young heiress's husband to

Unhappily, if made in Scotland. Cheviot's declaration has the force of law. His marriage to a total stranger, let alone the income of his friend Belvawney (Robert East) which depends on keeping him from either marrying or dying, is a question of where the border is drawn. Could you get more Gilbertian than that?

Though modestly staged (surreal sets might have done better), Roland Oliver's production grasps the ironies. Paul Arlington, a born if unobvious farceur, brings a broad, abrasive style to Cheviot's multiple prostestations of fidelity and parsimonious view of marriage as owning his wife's 17/6-a-yard wedding dress.

Angela Cheyne as the heiress Belinda is too twentieth-century but capitalizes on sentences like "Before I actually consent to take the irrevocable step that will place me on the pinnacle of my fondest hopes, you must give me some definite idea of your pecuniary position". Julie-Christian Young, more impressively, confronts life as Cheviot's other (possible) bride with rare but crushing glimpses of the iron hand in the lace glove and a formidable knowledge of the 1862 Companies

Even homely Maggie (Lindy Whiteford) and her mother (Greta Walson) advance on him with self-interest sauced to taste with sex-appeal and false modesty combined. Engaged gives no relief, but it uses the heartlessness of farce more expertly than most satirists have dared to.

might excuse the want of solidity in this performance. Günther Herbig, the conductor, was beating out each bar very decisively but not looking much further into the future, so that phrasing was rarely other than blankly ordinary and the work's superb changes of rhythmic gear brought no lift. At the syncopations in the first movement or the dotted trot in the finale one ought to sense the heavens wheel, instead of which Mr Herbig generated only a mild feeling that something had

In terms of sonority, too, the performance lacked weight. Mr Herbig put much into the contrast between the strings and his enlarged wind band, but his staccates were more snappish than massive, and generally the result was to accentuate what is most obvious in the score. It may be argued that the "Eroica" is a blatant work, but if so its blatancies ought to sound new,

Talk of a bid of 110p a share sent shares of builders' mer-chant UBM Group racing away op to equal the year's high of 93p yesterday.

At this level, the group is valued at nearly £55m with the lass manufacturer Pilkington Bres strongly tipped as the most likely predator. But Pilkington, which does not normally comment on market speculation, says: "The rumours are out of line."

There was certainly evidence last night to suggest that most of yesterday's support originated from overseas. Colguy Holdings, part of the Sir Robert McAlpine empire, is one of UBM's biggest shareholders with nearly 10 per cent of the equity.

UBM's trading record has been patchy over the past couple of years and recently the group announced a turnround at the interim stage from a loss of £706.000 into a pretax profit of £525,000.

Elsewhere, investors were warming to the latest batch of economic survey pointing to a gradual recovery in the econorny The FT Index continued to nudge its all time high of 731.4 sector, Barton group lost 3p to

> Marley's 180 per cent in- account for about half Marley's crease in pretax profits for first turnover, but the biggest benesix months of the year, ahead of market expectations, largely springs from the upturn in the construction industry, where the company produces roof and floor tiles and plastics products such as guttering. But its reorganized do-ityourself chain is also coming good, with some overseas operations looking better al-though trading profits are about the same as last year. Borrowings, still high at the year-end at £93m, have been marginally reduced in a firsthalf period which usually sees them higher than at the year end. That, and lower interest rates, have reduced interest payments by nearly £2m to £5.9m.

The problem in construction would come from interest rates lurching markedly upwards. That could bring a cooling off, hitting Marley next year rather than during 1985 when the next cyclical turn is due.

With analysts now looking for a virtual doubling of pretax profits to at least £23m in the full year and earnings per share generously higher, there is obviously room for an increased final dividend. With its high gearing, the company would be an obvious candidate for a rights issue later this year

Glynwed International is one of the few Birmingham-based steel and engineering companies to produce sparkling results.

Interim pretax profits to June are up by 26 per cent to £8.07m largely because of a strong contribution from the Ductiles steels business which was acquired late last year. More than £4m in cash has been squeezed from the Ductiles business since the acquisition and further gains should be made as management and marketing are strengthened. This helped swell profits in Britain by £2.7m. compared with last year, while overseas profits fell back by £1 1m after weak performances in South Africa where the economy is in deep recession, and the US. Present expectations are that profits for the seond half should comfortably exceed those of the

With final profits of £17m likely the shares continue to rate as a recovery stock at 115p, backed by a strong yield of 6.08 per cent.

Extracts from the Statement of the Chairm Mr A.S.W. Joseph, for the year ended 31st March, 1983.

★ Revenue after tax was 16.9% more than last year and the total dividend paid and recommended is 13.6% higher. ★ The net asset value per ordinary share was 112.1p (51st March, 1982: 95.0p).

The sansfactory result of the recent General Election should, apart from providing a salutary influence on business and the what from provious a saturary influence on business and the economy generally, serve to encourage the hopes that a somewhat less Draconian tax policy may prove beneficial to the oil exploration industries and therefore indirectly to the Trust. We are still reasonably optimistic that investing in major and seasoned Oil Companies, with a leavening of low or no vielding exploratory companies with exciting prospects, will prove beneficial.

The Chairman also stated at the Annual General Meeting on 3rd August. 1983 that the net asser value per ordinary share had increased to 138.8p at 30th June, 1983.

Local agencies could be given state subsidy

Private sector may get bigger role in helping small firms

Government officials are planning a big expansion in the role of private sector local enterprise agencies as the main. policy being developed by Mr David Trippier, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Department of Trade and Industry who is being dubbed "the small firms minister"

He wants to rationalize about 70 schemes the Conservatives have set up since 1979 to help small businesses. He is also looking at a change in the tax rules which would allow small companies to attract bright young managers by offering share options to compensate for loss of earnings and fringe benefits.

The planned changes in small firms policy coincides with a welter of public critisism on the effectiveness of what has already been done in the field.

The Association of Independent Businesses has said that "the smaller business community is appalled that the Government's initiative for independent firms is running

Mr Philip Bayliss, the associstion's chairman said the Government was exaggerating what has been done for the small business sector, and that larger firms had been helped more during the recession. Others have accused the Government of using the small firms bandwagon as no more than a cheap way of making political capital. One of the survey's key recommendations was that local private sector agencies should be more effectively used as business advisory centres provided they are given a subsidy to recruit specialist staff.

Mr Trippier, a former stockbroker who himself set up one of these local agencies, the Rossendale Enterprise Trust, in Lancashire, has seized on this as the way forward. This neatly combines a method of making the private agencies taking over small firms more aware of what is available and party demands for as much private sector involvement as possible in what used to be regarded as public

SALIENT POINTS FROM THE CHAIRMAN'S REVIEW

Profits, before taxation for the year ended 31st December 1982, are £3,836,000, compared with £3,088,000, for the previous year and after taxation are £2,074,000, compared with £1,276,000. Differences between rates of monetary correction and the cruzeiro/sterling exchange rates lead to fluctuations in the amounts of exchange differences from year to year which are not connected with normal trading and have been dealt with through Revenue Reserve. The Directors have recommended the payment of a final Dividend of 2.20p per share which, together with the interim dividend of 0.75p, already paid, makes a total of 2.95p per share for the year, being the same as 1981.

The listed investment portfolio was valued on 31st December 1982 at £6,402,000, a surplus over cost of £3,962,000. A later valuation made on 30th June 1983 showed figures of £7,182,000 and £4,903,000.

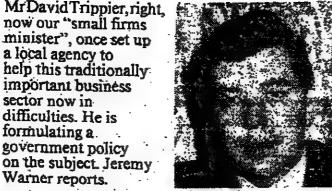

Attributable net assets for each 20p share at book values and including the surplus on listed investments, was 59.98p per share of which 29.24p is attributable to the United Kingdom and 30.74p to Brazil. If the fixed assets in Brazil are included, at their monetary corrected amount net assets in Brazil are increased to 43.55p per share, making a total of 72.79p per share.

Serious consideration is being given to taxing executive share options as capital rather than income so that they can be used more effectively to persuade bright young managers to leave a secure highly paid job with firing benefits in a large company for a lower paid and insecure one with a smaller

But if the private sector is encouraged to play a bigger role in developing small businesses and the Government's package of measures is streamlined and becomes better directed, there is still an overwelming job to be done in dismantling the barriers to small business development and encouraging the start up of less frivolous ventures that most of the anecdotal evidence on start ups suggest is the present norm. Better Government research on the needs and development of the business sector would prove invaluable.

The wholly owned subsidiaries in Brazil have shown an increase in Profits before Tax of 9 per cent in terms of Sterling, or 65.7 per cent in terms of Cruzeiros, since Shipping activities have remained at a nigh level. The Associated companies have continued to experience very difficult trading conditions. The Loss making companies in the Wilcom Group have been excluded from the Profit and Loss Account as the investment has been written down to a nominal amount, and £1,961,000 of Capital Reserves has been allocated for this purpose. The Profits attributable to the remaining Associated companies were £244,000.

FUTURE PROSPECTS The adverse events that affected the Brazilian economy in 1982 have continued in 1983. The Government Authorities have requested assistance from the IMF. One result of this may be more drastic measures to control Government expenditure and Monetary Policies aimed at reducing inflation.

Despite these difficulties, reports covering the first five months of the Group's operations in Brazil are satisfactory and our Group results should continue to benefit from our main activities, being connected with shipping services and towage, which will be influenced by the Government priorities to increase Brazilian integrational radius.

Barnes finds the cause of his season in shadows of depression

The cruellest aspect of the game of golf is the dark shadow it can east over a player at the peak of his career. It takes its toll at contrasting levels. Peter Alliss retired from full-time playing because he was suffering from the syndrome known as the "yips"; the American Bert Yancey bowed out of the game as a result of depression.

For Brian Barnes this has been a season of undiluted distress. He returns after a one week holiday for the £80,000 Dutch Open, sponsored by KLM, starting on the Kennemer course here today in the knowledge that he is languishing in 49th position in the official money list. Barnes has failed to finish each of the last four tournaments in which he has competed.

There have been conflicting rumours about his dramatic decline. Now he has arrived with the diagnosis from his doctor that he has been suffering from depression. The doctor stressed that the best cure would be to take one month off. Barnes argued that he has already had six months off this season. That alone, is probably a good sign. Barnes has been put on a course of anti-depressant tablets. He is not expecting miracles overnight. He says: "It is still hard looking at a golf ball. I never thought that anything of this nature could happen to me. But I am not the kind of couldn't care less person everyone takes me as. I bottle things up inside.

There is much sympathy for Barnes on the tour but golfers are professional sportsmen and so that sympathy will not extend to offeringg an olive branch on the golf course. In fact, with Sandy Lyle, who recently became a father for the first time, Sam Torrance and Bernard Gallacher also returning following a break it promises to be a fascinating week.

The Duch federation have almost doubled the first prize from last year, when Paul Way won, and Lyle is well aware that the £13,330 top prize would give him a marvellous start in his efforts to close the gap on the current money leader. Nick Faldo. The hope of Way successfully defending his title could be hindered by an injury to his right eye.

He unsuccessfully tried to imitate an American baseball player during practice and in swinging at a ball thrown at him he succeeded in hitting himself in the eye. The injury required five stitches but Way recalled that he once won a junior championship wearing a patch over his

RUGBY LEAGUE

The rapid strides made by Papua New Guinea since their emergence in the mid-seventies is underlined by Bradford Northern's attempts to sign the Papua New Guinea captain and second row forward, Phillip Ralta, Keith Mactlin writes.

The signing is expected to go through within the next few days, and Bradford Northern are awaiting the final clearance from the Papua New Guines Rughy League authorities. Raida, agod 24, a strong running forward, would be the first player from his country to play professionally in England. Papus New Guines were originally regarded as just about a match for the Grant Britain amateur touring sides. the success of southern hemisphere players in Britain last season is encouraging further signings. Warrington are pursuing a Maori prop forward, Pat Poaser. Carlisle, having survived what appeared to be a terminal crisis last season, have signed a utility back Gary Peacham from Hull and the much-travelled prop forward Alan Rowley, from Workinton Town.

It is fortunate that British rowing selectors, unlike their collegues in sthictics, do not face the problem of doubling up their selections. In their choice of single selections for the 18 rowing disciplines in this year's world championships alone animosity towards the selectors has never raced and contains only fruit rowing the selectors has never raced and contains only fuller and Jones with the experience of on international first. At least the selection boards in one case have stopped the tail wagging the dog but one must approach next month's championships with some trepidation. The men's heavyweight team had aiready selected on men's steve Redgrave in the single sculls and the coxed four. Four crews were added yesterday, the coxless pair of Hassan and Serivener, from the Lea; the coxless four which just missed the final in Lucerne; a new untested eight; and Chris Ballien and Jon Spencer-Jones in the double sculls.

The new men's eight is basically Copenhagen last Saturday, but this time it was Spencer-lones's turn to be off-colour and the British double did not compete on Sunday. Hassan and Scrivener earned their Union and Scrivener earned their Union Jacks together with great credit for the Lea chib by winning trials in Nottingham in coxless pairs against good class opposition (the tail-enders now of the new British eight).

The women selectors have revamped their whole squad and included six new vests in an eight and a four. Only Beryl Mitchell appears to stand a chance of a final place and a medal. There has been much controversy over the non-

it was a gala day here in the sunshine, with a touch of breeze to take the sweat out of the heat. They did not close the gates, but it might have been kinder if they had, since at least a thousand people must have spent the day standing, if they wanted to watch the cricket. It was the largest crowd I have seen here since Hammond's last match in 1951. Even my son Adam, a skilful scronnger of small corners, found himself defeated by the crush and had to come and sit with me in the relative austerity by lunchtime, the rinpureous hash was glowing, an the JJ? club were wearing their bright blue ties, except for the patron himself, Jack Davey, who pleaded some feeble excuse that he was moving house. It is odd the Durham has never been a furst-class county score cricketers from them county: good cricketers from there teep popping up all over the place.

The afternoon was not quite so satisfactory for Gloucestershire, after a lumch some of 149 for two in 35 overs. Given the relative strengths of the Gloucester bowing and Hampehire beating, I thought that they should have made 300. What was needed was a big innings from Zaheer, but after making an elegant 33, he was bowled by Stevenson, a stroke that seemed to lose its way in the middle.

Bainbridge and Hignell made useful contributions, but neither was one extraordinary moment when Marshall was owing Childs. Childs ducked under a bouncer, his bat waving vaguely, and the next thing we knew was afternoon to define the one-kilometre time trial, and yesterday afternoon be convincingly progressed through the latest round of the 4,000 metres pursuit.

Prize money for the Million stretches down to fifth place as follows: 1, $600,000, 2, $200,000, 3, $110,000: 4,$60,000; 5, $30,000. Be My Native, with £130,000 in the kinty after last year's venture, is hot on the trail again, having already won the Coronation Cup at Epsom this season.

Muscatite, who finished second in the Eclipse Stakes at Sandown

Be My Native chases a Million The fields for the Budweiser and a sum of $110,000, it was Million, to be run over a mile and a covious that more would follow Million, is the only other definite English runner at this stage, because the Madam Gay proved was firm decisions still have to be made.

Ban appeal by Cook

Paul Cook (above), who was suspended for eight days for "cureless" riding at Ayr on Tuesday night, said yesterday at Pontefract. "An appeal to pending, but my solicitor wants to see the film first, before he puts it in, He has another 24 hours but is also involved with Willie Carson's appeal. That's all I can say at the moment."

Walter Swinburn, who was at Ayr and saw the race, said: "I think Paul's gut to appeal. The gap was there, and he was haifway through it when they tightened up. Things are getting ridiculous nowadays. Frenchie Nicholson always taught us to go for a gap and take a chance, and my gov'nor Michael Stoute always likes me to go the shortest way, but jockeys are now having to ride to be confail. The game is about way, but jockeys are now having to ride to be careful. The game is about winning and I hope they will rethink it all."

announced their findings.

The original entry of 159 has been whittled down to 24 so we now have the preferred field of 14 in alphabesical order, together with the 10 reserves who can be called upon in order if merit. Even at this comparatively early stage, one can easily picture this year's field as being the best so far.

heing the best so far.

Any race with the legendary John Henry is the field besides a runner or two trained by another of America's great racing characters Charlie Whittingham, cannot fail to be a success. After the triumphant comeback in the American Handicap at Hollywood Park on July 4, John Henry is now or course for Artington Park where he won the inaugural Million in 1981.

With Prin's Ide and The Wooder.

vin Erin's list and the wonder to rely on, Whittingham, too, has a sound chance of winning it again. He won it 12 months ago with Perrault, Eria's Isle, who used to be trained in Ireland by Jim Bolger, in another who has thrived on the west coast in Whittingham's care. English trainers tend to be wary when considering big international races run far afield. But after Paul Kelleway's bold decision to take up the challenge in 1981 with Madam Gay was rewarded with third place regarding Tolomeo, Wassl and Diamond Shoal. The latter was that the race came at a good time in the European racing calendar and that it was possible to go to Chicago Diamond Shoal. The latter was runner-up to Time Charter in the King George VI and Queen Elizabth Diamond Stakes.

Ian Balding, Diamond Shoal's trainer, is at present in the United States attending the yearling sales at Saratoga where he will obviously discuss the pros and cons of running Diamond Shoal with the four-year-old's owner Paul Mellon. Diamond Shoal has done conspicuously well on all his numerous trips abroad. and still return for more. For only a formight after her rewarding battle with John Henry and The Bart at Artington, Madam Gay was in the thick of the fray once again at Longchamp, where she finished third in the Prix Vermeille beaten third in the Prix Vermeille beaten less than two lengths by that superb filly April Run. It was also short must the Million was perfectly leasable for our top class jockeys. Both in 1981 and last year our jockeys were able to ride at Goodwood on the Saturday, fly overnight to the United States, in plenty of time to be there for the Arlington meeting before returning the same way, again in good time to be racing the next day.

Heartened by all that Robert on all his numerous trips abroad, and I shall not be surprised if he

Commodities & Cargo Finance

European Bank-London

Our Client is one of the largest European Banks with a unique reputation in Commodity Finance. They seek to strengthen their London team by the appointment of two executives but the long-term prospects for appointees are on a world-wide basis.

Senior Commodity Executive

Applicants will have been in banking for three/five years, will have a thorough training and background in credit analysis, and will already have experience of the commodity area. They will need to be natural communicators and will be working in a highly active and imaginative business. Responsibility levels are high and the ability to make decisions is paramount.

Commodity Executive

In this case the experience level demanded is slightly more limited. The job would suit someone in their early or mid twenties. Applicants will have been in banking for around two years and will again have had formal credit training. The job is likely to appeal to a person who has an interest in developing specialist knowledge of this expanding area of banking

In both cases, because of the nature of the work, a knowledge of French and/or one other European language is essential. Candidates are likely to be graduates but evidence of the ability to communicate is the key factor. It is to be emphasised that the jobs will initially be in London. In addition to generous and negotiable salanes there are the usual banking benefits including subsidised mortgage.

Please write in confidence to Colin Barry at Overton Shirley and Barry (Management Consultants), Second Floor, Morley House, 26 Holborn Viaduct, London EC1A 2BP, Tel: 01-583 1912.

The Times Guide to career training Explaining the computer world

Services Commission has been criticized for neglecting to find TOPS courses designed to meet the need for skilled executives in the computer industry.
It is encouraging to discover that some fresh ground has now been broken. At the Polytechnic of the South Band, three-month course on Information Technology and Salesmanship, run by Garth Spiers Interpersonal Skills Consultants, has just completed its second cycle.

The course is intended to provide the computer industry with a rare breed: people who are able to explain clearly and simply what the boffins of the IT (Information Technology) world are making available to busy executives, managers and secretaries in modern offices - and to you and me at home.

The content of the course consists of two modules running parallel; on the one hand, Hardware, Software, Peripherals and their Market Users, on the other hand, Personal Development and Career Orientation.

Malcolm Jordan, a consultant programmer with substantial experience in the computer world, and formerly a schoolteacher, is incharge of the technical content. He provides a wide-ranging introduction to com-puters (especially micros) and their applications, with the help of several visiting tutors.

Garth Spiers himself takes the other part of the course. "My objective is to stir each and every member of the course clearly to establish where he or she is going in his or her working life", Spiers says, a former computer salesman "Once you know what you really want to achieve in selling, you're in a good position to learn how to sell by influencing buyers' atti-tudes, to acquire and up date product

Almost a fifth of new graduates entering manufacturing industry this autumn with a second-class honours

tenth of those joining other types of employer are likely to do so. A survey of 78 graduate employers conducted by the Standing Conference of Employers of Graduates found very wide variations in starting salaries the lowest salaries recorded being under £5,200 in manufacturing and under £4,600 in non-manufacturing.

The median salaries were £6,350 and £6,050 respectively.

Is high-tech creating more jobs than it is destroying? According to the Association of Scientific, Technical edon or other allowances). Only a

Kieran Duignan reports on a three-month course to help its graduates find jobs in a growing industry

Spiers' emphasis makes sense: several of the 20 members of each course so far have come with redundancy notices still dancing before their eyes and some were unemployed for many months.

Methods of tuition so far have been diverse. They included classroom instruction during the early weeks, hands-on training with micro-computers and word-processors, group connselling, workshop practice in selling techniques (sometimes with the aid of closed-circuit television), market research projects, attendance market research projects, attendance at trade exhibitions followed up by reports back to other course members. There's a lot to be said, on a course "There's a lot to be said, on a course like ours, for working in pairs and in small groups as well as in the full group," Spiers observes. "I want to see each member accepting and giving compliments and criticisms in adult ways. I attach a lot of importance to handling the cut and thrust of sales interviews in an open and positive manner. By working on their approaches during dealings here with their fellows, our trainees learn how to maintain their self-respect when they're under fire – just as they will need to later on with bosses, customers or colleagues." The age of course members ranged from mid-50 to early 20s, and the members came from a great variety of backgrounds. For a start, they originated from every corner of the British Isles. Graduates sat on a par with former apprentices, and with others lacking formal qualifications.

engineering programming technical selling and industrial buying, as the courses developed, they exchanged information, suggestions and points of view with a former barman, teacher, soldier, warehouseman and others who brought little by way of technical know-how to the course.

Where have the course members gone on completion of their training? Eighty-five per cent of those in the first course were employed when they were last heard of (all but one of them in some quarter of the computer industry). Some went back to industries with which they were already familiar - such as agriculture and printing - and are now bandling the hardware and software needs of firms there. Others took up sales positions offering opportunites to concentrate on products that particularly interested them - microcomput-ers for business users, for example or on software applications that give scope for their earlier experience, such as accounting, database or decision support packages.

Those with a fair amount of previous experience with computers were self-employed or working with systems houses, while younger course graduates who lacked experience in computers and in selling made their career entry at the domestic model end of the market, the highest level of remuneration known to have been chieved by someone leaving one of Spiers' courses was £15,000 and a car.

"I'm not really concerned whether our trainees use what they learn with us as employees or in self-employ-ment", Spiers comments. "From the feedback so far, I do feel confident that our course is providing almost every member with a new sense of direction in his or her career, And equally important, we provide the computer industry with skilled sales personnel it needs."

ere 20,000 unfilled vacancies in computing because of a shortage of skilled candidates, and a shortage of 7,000 electronic engineers in manufacturing industry.

The Central Data Institute in Bristel reports that 12 out of 14 TOPS trainees have recently found jobs within three weeks of completing their microelectronics technicians courses. In addition, Lucas and Ford both revealed that they are successful in converting mechanical engineers on their payroll to electronic engineers in order to keep abroast of new opportunities in technology.

£50 per week less spending money than youngsters re-cruited into the armed forces under normal procedures, Rodney Cowton. Defence Correspondent, writes.

They will receive the normal youth training scheme pay of £25 a week, less a food and accomodation deduction of about £10. Recruitment for the one-year training begins today. In appouncing further details of the scheme, Mr Johm Stanley, Minister of State for the Armed Forces, said that when the scheme was fully in operation - by about the middle of next year - it was hoped that it would provide 5,200 places for young people.

Anger over French curbs on day-trips

By a Staff Reporter

The Government was given a warning in May that France was unhappy about the way day-trippers from Britain were allowed into French ports on short-term excursion cards. it emerged last night.

The disclosure follows French immigration officials' refusal to admit 100 coloured British day trippers with 60hour identity papers.

As anger over the refusal grew, the Foreign Office said the Government had already agreed to a review of the 18-year-old agreement which allows Britons into France for up to 60 hours without a passport or a visa.

A spokesman said that France had made it clear in May that it felt the system was being "abused". As a result, French officials were due to meet Foreign Office and Home Office officials to try to resolve the differences.

Although no dates for meelings have been fixed, the flouting of the agreement by the French has clearly angered the Government.

The Foreign Office said: "We are concerned about the report and are taking this up with the

At least 100 coloured people, mainly West Indians, were turned back from Calais and Boulougne last Sunday because they failed to produce visas which are compulsory for entry to France by non-EEC citizens.

The French Embassy yesterday refused to comment when asked how the officials had known the day-trippers were not British citizens.

A spokesman said: "Some West Indians who did not have visas have been returned. They could not be allowed into the ports without a visa."

· Mr William Trent, chairman of the West Indian Standing Conference, said: "I feel very angry about this. However you look at it, the French have chosen to discriminate against one group of people."

But the protests do not conceal the fact that, under the memorandum drawn up in 1971, the French are entitled to refuse admission to Britons.

Nevertheless, two ministries in Paris are already locked in argument. The Interior Ministry refuses to comment on the incident, and the Social Affairs Ministry says that if reports of the refusal are true, it could "constitute a scandal".
